

Fact sheet

ART Provider Registration Scheme in South Australia

What is the ART provider registration scheme?

Under the Assisted Reproductive Treatment Act 1988, in order to provide assisted reproductive treatment (ART), a person¹ must be registered by the Minister for Health and Wellbeing to do so.

The Registration provisions in the Act and the Regulations set out:

- > eligibility for registration (see below)
- > mandatory conditions for registered ART providers
- > suspension or cancellation of registration
- > removal from the Register
- > reinstatement on the Register
- > appeal process.

The registration scheme for ART providers ensures accountability and transparency for those receiving assisted reproductive treatment services in South Australia.

Who is eligible to be registered to provide assisted reproductive treatment?

To be eligible for registration to provide ART in South Australia, a person must meet specific requirements under the Act and the Regulations. An applicant (including directors and key personnel²) must demonstrate to the Minister that they are:

- > a fit and proper person
- > Reproductive Technology Accreditation Committee (RTAC) accredited and licensed

The applicant is required to complete an Application for ART Registration form and submit the necessary supporting evidence to the Minister for Health and Wellbeing.

How is an application for registration to provide ART made?

The Application for ART Registration can be downloaded from the fertility services link in the SA Health website. The form needs to be completed and signed by the applicant/s, including company directors/authorised officers and key personnel. Once completed, the application form, together with all supporting documentation, should be sent to:
